LACTATED FOOD

150 Meals for $1.00

It Saved my Child's Life.
"When my child was born, the doctor ordered one of the other Foods. She ate that until she nearly died. I had three doctors, who said the trouble was indigestion, and ordered the food changed to Lactated Food. It saved my child's life, and I owe you many thanks for it. I regard your Food as invaluable, and superior to all other artificial food for babies."

Speech of General Harrison.

About three hundred commercial travelers, not representing any particular organization of that guild, but acting in their individual capacity, called at the Harrison residence in Indianapolis, Saturday night. They were marshaled by F. H. Wolf, of Rushville, who addressed the General in a speech in response to which Gen. Harrison said:

"Gentlemen of the Commercial Travelers' Association of Indiana, and visiting friends: I most heartily thank you for this cordial manifestation of your respect. It is to be expected, when one has been named for office by one of the great parties, that those who are in accord with him in his political convictions will show their interest in the campaign which he represents, but it is particularly gratifying to me that many of you who differ with me in political opinion, reserving your own opinions and choice, have come here to-night to express your gratification, personally, that I have been named by the republican party as its candidate for the Presidency. It is a very pleasant thing in politics when this sort of testimony is possible, and it is very gratifying to me to-night to receive it at your hands. I do not know why we cannot hold our political difference with respect for each other's opinions, and with entire respect for each other personally. Our opinions upon the great questions which divide parties ought not to be held in such a spirit of bigotry as will prevent us from extending to a political opponent the concession of honesty in his opinions and that personal respect to which he may be entitled. I very much value this visit from you, for I think I know how to estimate the commercial travelers of America. I am not going to open before you to-night any store of flattery. I do not think there is any market for it here. You know the value of that commodity perfectly. I do not mean to suggest that you are dealers in it yourselves in your intercourse with your customers, but I do mean to say that your wide acquaintance with men, that judgment of character and even of the moods of men which is essential to the successful prosecution of your business, makes you a very unpromising audience upon which to pass any stale compliments. My memory goes back to the time when there were no commercial travelers. When I first came to Indianapolis to reside your profession was not known. The retail merchant went to the wholesale house and made his selections there. I appreciate the fact that those who successfully pursue your calling must, in the nature of things, be masters of the business in which you are engaged, and possess great adaptability and a high order of intelligence. I thank you again for this visit and give you in return my most sincere respect and regard. I regret that there is not room enough here for your comfort; but I shall be glad if any or all of you will remain for better acquaintance and less formal intercourse."

Mr. Morton notified.

As stated in the GAZETTE, the committee appointed by the Chicago convention to notify Mr. Levi P. Morton of his nomination for the Vice Presidency arrived in Rhinebeck, N. Y., Saturday afternoon. Upon reaching Mr. Morton's residence, Chairman Estee was ushered into the drawing room and advanced within a few feet of Mr. Morton. Immediately behind came the other members of the committee. Mr. Estee then delivered the following address: "The national convention of the republican party recently assembled in Chicago nominated as its candidate for President Gen. Harrison, and with equal unanimity selected you as its nominee for Vice President. By order of that convention we were appointed a committee to notify its nominees of their selection. This pleasant duty has been in part performed in giving Gen. Harrison, your associate upon the ticket, that notification. It only remains for us to discharge the further duty conferred upon us by this official notice to you. The country has already passed judgment upon your selection, and it has met such universal approval that it is only left this committee to add its own expression of their high appreciation of your own personal qualities, as well as their confidence in your eminent fitness for the position to which the deliberate judgment of the convention assigned you. In conclusion, we believe that this notification to you will not be a meaningless formality, but that your acceptance will result in a triumphant election."

Mr. Morton replied as follows: "Mr. Chairman, and gentlemen of the committee: I am profoundly sensible of the high honor which has been conferred upon me by the national republican convention recently in session at Chicago, and thank you, gentlemen, for the courteous and complimentary terms in which you have officially announced my nomination as the candidate of the republican party for the Vice Presidency. I am also deeply sensible of the honor conferred upon the State of New York in the selection of a citizen of this State as one of the standard bearers in the approaching peaceful conflict of the two great political parties of the country for supremacy and the governmental control. New York represents in a large degree the business interests of all those overgrowing and wide-spreading communities of varied interests and industries which it is the mission of the republican party to foster and protect. The platform so wisely adopted at Chicago has this mission clearly in view, and by its enunciation of these principles makes the issue of the coming campaign clear and distinct. I accept the position tendered by the convention of which you are the honored representatives, and will in due time address to you, Mr. Chairman, an official communication to that effect."
